SPOTLIGHT

Making Chatsworth House sparkle

Chatsworth House is one of the most prestigious stately homes in the UK. As part of their recent refurbishments of 2007, we were invited to provide lighting advice and guidance with a view to devising a lighting scheme for the Carriage House restaurant located in the beautiful 18th century Grade I listed stable block.

Having presented our scheme to the Duchess of Devonshire and leading Estate officials, we were delighted to be commissioned to carry out the full lighting scheme installation working within the brief of 'making the space sparkle'.

Also working within the strict Grade I listing renovation constraints, we implemented a large range of lighting that included track mounted spotlights and LEDs that work from a complex lighting control system. In addition, the three large wooden chandeliers that were already present in the space were refinished in a gold effect.

Completed in 2007, this project has been one of our most prestigious to date and we look forward to working with the Estate on further exciting projects in the future.

Foscarini Uto

Lagrania Design • 2005

Here at Oldfield Lighting, the Foscarini Uto has been available since its 2005 launch and we regard it as one of our most unique showroom pieces. This interactive lamp is part of an acclaimed collection brought to you by one of the world's leading lighting manufacturers who specialise in transforming unique design-led ideas into a tangible reality.

The Uto, made from silicon rubber, is a shock-resistant and versatile lamp that embodies a playful, chameleon-like personality. It can be freely positioned both inside or outside the home, providing a useful option throughout the dark winter nights.

Available in white, yellow or orange, the Uto can be used as a hooked pendant or floor lamp and at 3.2m long, can be a perfect focal point for any room.
